DRUG ADDICTION

The power of healing

"I could hear the birds singing and noticed the buds on the trees for the first time" said Cath

Valium is known to be one of the nasty addictive drugs, on TV over many years I have noticed on programs patients on Valium, and the medical profession, have said it usually takes months, sometimes years to come off this as it is so addictive, and I would not dispute this.

So I will tell you a story of one of my patients.

"Cath" I will call her, was on Valium for the second time after a bad and violent relationship.

Her son called me out to see his Mum.

As I walked through the door it was like walking into a wall the negativity and atmosphere was so strong.

I greeted Cath, who was a lovely lady, looking very confused, disturbed, and unwell.

First I could "feel" I needed to get to know Cath, so I just sat down by her side and held her hand.

Cath started talking to me, she just kept talking and talking, her son just sat there with his mouth open, he said to me .."Mum does not talk"

She did to me !

Then I gave Cath spiritual healing, while scanning her body I felt a major problem around her lower body, nothing that I was to concerned about, I managed to remove it without any trouble, Cath did not mention this and I did not mention it as I did not want to cause her any more worry.

Cherie is starting to look like a fully grown Pyrenean now, although she still has a little way to go, and a long way in mentality, she is still very much a puppy.

There is a lovely winding walk down to the beach from here, where there is another nice walk from the beach inland to another tin mine ruins, following a stream that is tinted red by the old miners tin. We have spend many hours walking this path, Billy and now Cherie drinking from the stream.

Have we found the resting place of Excalibur King Arthur's sword ?

A message from Reverend Malcolm

Hi spiritual seekers,

No prizes for those of you who have noticed I have finally changed my photo here.

I thought it was about time I took a new up to date picture.

This was taken this July on the coastal pathway just one mile from our cottage, this is where we walk Billy and Cherie every day, twice a day, you can see a few yachts in the distance.

While I said earlier on this year, I did not get a weather forecast before the end of last year for this year which is most unusual, I was told before the spring that the summer this year will not be much to talk about, and to date has proved to be true. I did however predict that September and October would be really good weather, so fingers crossed, and do not put those bikini's and sun tan lotion away too soon !

The photograph left was taken in August 2nd at one of our special favourite places, St Agnes on the north (Atlantic) coast. This is St Agnes Head, looking towards Chapple Porth, with Porth Towan in the distance.

This is an 100 plus miles round trip from where we live, on the opposite coast.

PLEASE NOTE: DUE TO THE MANY SCAM CALLS WE RECEIVE, I HAVE CHANGED MY PHONE NOT TO ACCEPT NO NUMBER CALLS, SO IF YOU HAVE YOUR PHONE SET TO WITHHOLD YOUR NUMBER YOU WILL HAVE TO ALTER THIS TO RING US

What is it With our pets and Washing baskets ?

A SIGHT FOR SORE EYES

While coming back from treating my patient in London recently, the train stops at Redding, which is just about 30 minutes from London, then it is non stop to Exeter St Davids which is the other side of the country, there it turns south heading for Cornwall. At Redding I saw several lads running for the train with full size surf boards in their arms, these are quite a size to carry as any of you who have seen them close up.

It was a nice sight to see, while we always see surfers when we go to the other coast, it was still a nice holiday sight to see.

Early spring the moorland is covered with deep purple Heather, then around August as that dies down yellow heather pops through as you can see here.

The view from the Head, the Atlantic waves rolling in across the golden sand. Immediately below is Chapple Porth, in the distance Porth Towan.

This is one of the best places we know for walks, here there are hundreds of paths across the moors going every which way, some down to beaches, some to the coastal path with others just across the moors, or even to old Tin Mine ruins. Some seen above right.

The same view looking to the left, the Wheal Coates Tin Mine ruins, listed as one of the best tin mine ruins in Cornwall, another in St. Agnes the last remaining tin production centre in the UK at the Blue Hills mine.

Dozmary Lake, is King Arthur's Excalibur here

Dozmary Pool in Cornwall not very far from us is this the final resting place of King Arthur's sword Excalibur ?

© Reverend Malcolm

Billy having a good mooch around and enjoying himself while visiting Dozmary Pool situated quite high on Bodmin Moor.

You cannot help feeling an eerie feel about the place. There was a story that this was a bottomless pool where King Arthur threw Excalibur.

There is not a lot of fuss on arriving there, not even a car park, just a small space by the side of a very narrow road, big enough for 3 or 4 cars.

Then there is nothing smart about it there as well, no fancy signs or anything, just a narrow very lumpy track that is hard to walk along leading all the way down to Dozmary Pool.

It was hard but worth while when we got there.

© Reverend Malcolm

I wonder if this is true, or just another legend ?

The eerie feel to the place is very real indeed, something is causing this ?

If you look at the shore line on this photograph, while it is uninteresting and just dirt, there was nothing that could cause any reflection of any kind.

So why then you need to ask yourself, is there two light anomalies close to the waters edge ?

You can see many along the waters edge and even up in the sky, some may try to explain this away by claiming them to be light reflection, but there is no explanation for the 2 in the dirt !

Remember, believing is not seeing,

..... seeing is believing.

This could have been a condition that was coming into her body, or left from a previous illness, so I said nothing as I didn't want to worry Cath.

After treatment the first thing Cath said was "what are you wearing ? ", "Nothing" I said "I could smell the cologne my old Nan used to wear" Cath said, "I know" I said, "she popped in to give you her love" A little smile came on her face.

Then Cath said, " I also have a shingles type condition around my lower waist I did not tell you about, but the pain has now gone" ? I said I felt that and removed it but did not mentioned it as there was no need.

Cath's son was very pleased at how his Mother seemed after treatment.

I always ask the patient to phone me 24 hours after treatment to see how they feel.

Cath rang me as requested, telling me as soon as her head hit the pillow that night she was asleep for the first time in a long time, adding she had gone out to buy food also the first time in a long while.

What brought a tear to my eyes is she said "for the first time I noticed it was spring ?, I could see the buds on the trees, and I could hear the birds singing" I said to myself, JOB WELL DONE

Then something that I would think doctors etc would find it hard to believe Cath told me she had not taken a Valium since ! Not bad for an addictive drug the medical profession tell us it can take up to years to come off, in just one session and she did not need any more.

I met a friend of hers 18 months later, I did not know her but she knew me, she told me Cath was still OK 18 months on.

HOLDING CAMPING SITE IN THE CLENT HILLS, WORCESTERSHIRE

A SUMMER PHOTOGRAPH FOR THE MIDDLE OF SUMMER

Holding camp site at Clent, Worcestershire, the first permanent camp site of the Camping Club of GB, and my local site, it was named after the founder of the Camping Club in 1937 if I remember right. You will not find the site listed as "Holding" now as they have changed its name, this is a pity in my opinion, and disrespectful to its founder !

Who's that hansom chap standing there I hear you say ? Oh, that was me half a lifetime ago, wish I could go back to those easy care free days of yesteryear.

© Reverend Malcolm

Note my "posh" car (lol). An old Austin A50 I owned in my late teens between my BSA and my Jaguar days. I fitted twin carburettors and tuned this up quite a bit, but it kept blowing cylinder heads, this engine was known for this.

I used this camp site a lot, it was just over the hill so to speak to my home, you can see how old this photo is by the cars, tents and caravans.

I really used to love camping, still do but tent living is probably not best for our age and limited limb movement. What good times and memories I have from yesteryear, as I am sure you do.

This photograph taken with my old Kodak 120 folding front camera, 2 1/4" square negatives

We went to see Colin Fry from TV program "The 6th Sense"

A total waste of time and money - think before you go

A few weeks ago we called into a local camp site, just to see if they had caravan storage as we had to move our charities caravan.

On entering the reception I noticed an advert for an evening with Colin Fry and guests ?

Many years ago I watched him on the free view channels on his TV program ... "The 6th Sense"...

He seems a good medium, (although there are some who say he is fake, offering proof), he came across as very good on TV, perhaps he made some mistakes in the past ?

The tickets were £20 each so I brought 2.

This turned out to be the worst night ever, for many reasons, first, all we saw was a entourage of different so called psychics who's ability I found dubious.

On arriving at the camp site we noticed people standing outside chatting to, who we later found out to be some of these so called "readers", not very professional in our opinion.

If that was not enough, during the many breaks throughout the evening we noticed many people standing at the bar also talking to some of the "readers", and these people were picked out by these "readers", leaving them right open as plants and the like.

In fact one lady we saw talking to these "readers" at the bar was chosen for a reading by no less than 2 of the "readers" she had been talking to ?

All very unprofessional, dubious, and in bad taste we thought.

If that was not enough, during these breaks, non de script music was played so loud it was horrendous, one has to ask was the person in charge of the music of so little intelligence they could not see and realise most the audience was older people, and not the age group that would want such loud music deafening them ?

Even a man trying to sell raffle tickets had to ask him to turn the music down as he could not even talk to the people !

If that was not enough, they were flashing disco lights all around the floor, this was supposed to be a evening of mediumship, not a cheap side show which is all it turned out to be !

One would expect during such evenings to hear quiet relaxing or meditational music between sessions, not what was more like a kinder garden disco !

We could not be more disappointed as we were that evening.

After booking up to see the medium as advertised on the leaflets to be subjected to that utter chaos and mess and unknown readers that one had to look upon through what one observed and performance.

.... An evening with Colin Fry and guests Should mean just that, Colin Fry with the odd guest not ALL guests and no Colin Fry.....

At 10 30pm we were so upset and disappointed, not to mention completely fed up with our ear drums been constantly bombarded with unacceptable high levels of bad music, we decided to leave...

A total waste of £40 which was taken from us by deception.

I did do some research into Colin Fry, to find a web site and email address so I could give him my views about this unacceptable behaviour, as a professional in my spiritual field.

What I found was quite sad, Colin Fry has been diagnosed with untreatable lung cancer, although he still travels around with this show ?

I do feel very sorry for Colin, but he should not be deceiving hundreds, probably thousands of people out of their money by advertising his shows, bringing in people who have heard his name, or even seen him in TV as I did, when he is not attending in person.

This is fraud clearly, unknown readers earning money on the back of Colin's name and success.

On looking further these shows are booked all through the year still, many months through the weeks as well.

He is saying "the show must go on"

But he is not informing all these people paying good money to see him when he is not appearing, this is taking money by deception on a big scale.

On top of that, his information says some events may be cancelled due to Collins condition, but the tickets will still be valid just take them to the next show ?, So will people want to maybe travel vast distances if the show they paid for is cancelled, and if they did they would be even more upset to find they have been mislead completely as we were.

One would expect some professionalism and integrity from Colin, all that is shown by this and the many numerous shows still to come, greed and money is all that is important.

What a great shame for all concerned.

So should you see these shows advertised as they are all over the country, please take notice of our experiences and what you will find is the truth.

Even if the show we went to see music wise was the actual venue's fault, it is still not acceptable.

There was a rolling TV advert asking for even more money the entire show for what is claimed an animal sanctuary in Spain. All very "tatty and in bad taste" in our opinion.

I shall send out my healing thoughts for Colin, as I feel sorry for him, but he needs to take action on the above.

When I first started treating patients seriously, more years ago than I care to remember, back well before the turn of the century, I used to visit patients more than they come to me.

When I started healing most my patients did not know what a CD was let alone have one, so I knew I needed a decent music system to take with me for my patients to listen to, as well as helping myself and my doctors.

Initially I made one up with bits I already had around.

I had a pilots case, as well as 2 decent Sony speakers, and a "Walkman" type CD player.

So I wired this up with a long lead so I could plug it into the mains on arrival at my patients home.

This worked well, all be it a little messy as I had to pull the speakers and player out of the case with wires around.

After a number of years, I decided to make something more professional looking and easier to use, so I brought a camera case with pre punched foam squares so you can just pull what you need out to fit equipment safely, I had to buy different speakers as my old Sony's were much to large.

Fitting the speakers and CD unit into the special foam, with a long lead fitting into the lid, all I had to do is open the case, pull the wire out and plug it in, it looked the part and did the job very well with a good sound.

This lasted many years, up to this year in fact, and it is still perfect to use, but it is not always possible to take it with me in some circumstances, it is not heavy, but bulky.

One evening when I was messing about on my laptop as I do not like the TV, I started looking at blue tooth speaker, just for something to do passing the time, of course I did know of them seeing them many times on sites, but discarded them through looks thinking them as more of gimmick, or just for people who wanted something small for their phone or laptop, perhaps I am too old fashion but I like a things to look like what they should be.

Then I saw reports about some, good and bad, after a bit of mooching I saw a magical name ... "Denon" ...

Most of you probably have never heard of that name as you will not find them in your local electrical store, Denon do high end Hi Fi equipment with amazing testimonials of their quality, this is something on my "love to own" list one day, a complete set of Denon HiFi separates.

I never imagined they would have made an item like this, the testimonials were way above all the others as to be expected with this companies reputation, one one or two did say they thought it may have a little to much bass, but this is something that gets high marks with me, a god bass reproduction, this is a sign of a good speaker, cheap and small ones have no bass at all sounding rather tinny.

It was not cheap, but quality never is.

So I brought a Denon Envaya blue tooth speaker.

Denon do a "tube" size version as many are, for people who are looking for a compact size, as well as the model I brought.

The Envaya measures 10 inches by 5 inches so is a decent size for a portable speaker, it is surprisingly heavy for its size when you pick it up, again a sign of quality.

There are 3 speakers in this model, amazing sound for the size, and yes, it has a good bass.

The Envaya pairs up to your mobile phone, laptop ect., very easily, it comes with a mains charger, and a USB socket so you could actually charge your phone or device from it !

It has a AUX socket to plug a device in by wire should you want, as well as a good volume for its size.

As an optional extra there is even a good strong travelling case for this model, where I brought it they supplied this @ £20) free.

The blue tooth connection is very strong, I have walked upstairs with my phone and the Envaya has still been playing down stairs !

Now, when visiting patients, should I not wish to take my music system in a box, I can simply carry the Envaya in its case.

On arrival at my patients home, all I need to do is get it out of its case, switch it on, connect it to my mobile phone which is quick and easy, and away I go playing any music I have stored on it. (cancelling calls of course).

NO wiring at all to bother about, and a sound quality easily as good, in fact better than most computer speakers.

In bygone years, one could not trust batteries as the life of any device was very limited for my needs, now with new batteries and technology this is no longer a problem. As I have mentioned in 2 previous news letters, (re my professional ear piece and head set).

The battery life listed for the Envaya is 10 hours, more than needed for a days visiting patients as a rule.

I do not doubt this, as the first thing I do when arriving at my hotel room in London is put my meditational music on so I can relax and meditate in readiness to got to treat my patient.

Then on my return, I put it on again listening to it during the evening, I have used it without charge for around 7 hours or more easily, and it has still shown around half charge or almost, so great.

Of course it can still be used what it is plugged in charging in any case.

The Envaya gets my full approval for everything about it or I would not have brought it, on using it I am even more impressed.

It is far from cheap, RR around £170, but for what it offers one cannot expect it to be, it is possibly the best.

HALO HALO HALO - "EVENING ALL"

Two boys in blue outside Primark's opposite my hotel room, they were there for some time, not seen them before so maybe they were looking for someone, or maybe they were just passing time till tea break ?

THE DOZY COCKNEY LONDON BLACK CAB DRIVER

On one of my recent visits to London to treat my patient, I come across this, walking up to the taxi's, there was 1 parked right on the traffic lights engine running. One would rightfully think he was waiting for the lights to turn green, 9

I could not walk up to him anyway as there were metal safety railings preventing this, so I walked up to another parked much further back in a safe position, giving him my destination I got inside.

He drove away, stopping at the first cab still parked there, the 1st driver said "unbelievable", my driver replied "they all do that", being amazed at the stupidity I said in a stern voice, (not like me), "carry on I am paying for this"

On our arrival he was all Sir this and Sir that, I paid him and said "you want to go and tell that cabie if he wants fares he needs to park in a safe place not right on the traffic lights with cars whizzing past !

The driver agreed saying I have seen that before.
